THE BARLOW HOUSE

Tom Barlow

The Barlow family is pleased to announce that the Barlow House Museum in Barlow, Ballard County, Kentucky, is now open. The museum was created, endowed and named by the late Vivian J. Barlow as a gift to the residents of Ballard County and the region. It is dedicated to the memory of Vivian J. Barlow and the descendents of Clifton Jessie and Carrie Miller Barlow.

After a lifetime of teaching including a distinguished career at the Choate School in Wallingford, Connecticut, where he was a master until he retired in 1965, Vivian Barlow died in Barlow, June 28, 1990, at the age of 95 years. He had completed restoration on the house made necessary after a major fire in 1989. Mr. Barlow established the Vivian J. Barlow Foundation to hold and maintain The Barlow House Museum housing a family collection of furniture and memorabilia spanning 200 years. This Museum stands as a proud landmark in Barlow, Kentucky.
